

Neeti Walavalkar

Leaving a long-time comfortable corporate job Neeti opened herself up to hear the plans of the Universe, and that has led to a powerful learning journey. Trying to find answers about life from a very young age led her to volunteer with the blind, the under-privileged and elderly. Neeti is an avid traveler and nature-lover, meditates daily and hosts Awakin Circles weekly. She strongly believes that service does not start when you have something to give; it blossoms naturally when you have nothing left to take. She lives in Pune, where she is blessed with a wonderful life partner, a son, an adorable Lhasa Apso, a little flower garden on the window, and sparrows on the sill that make her family complete. Of late, taking care of her elderly father suffering from alzheimers has been a transformational experience for her.

What Makes You Come Alive?

Many things...

But nature in its true self..

A new sapling in the rock, a spring bubbling from nowhere, a birds call, so many things....

Pivotal turning point in your life?

Leaving my corporate job of 22 years

An Act of Kindness You'll Never Forget?

When a village woman out of nowhere in the Himalayas randomly feeds me lunch. (I was really hungry but had not shared with anybody)

One Thing On Your Bucket List?

Kailash Mansarovar yatra

One-line Message for the World?

Treat others the way you would like to be treated.